ADMINISTRATOR'S REPORT April 2004 Update

Subarea Health Planning Councils (SACs) Activities

- Hawaii Dr. Sharon Vitousek, of the North Hawaii Outcomes Institute, gave a presentation on their efforts to identify critical health issues and convene collaboration to improve community health. She highlighted several high priority issues including reductions in low-birth weight babies; decreasing child abuse and neglect; lowering the number of motor vehicle accidents; and improving cardiovascular health. The SAC is reviewing Hawaii County health indicators and the process they used to develop their behavioral health projects to assess current priorities and move forward. Tom Brown, County Mass Transit Agency, reported that the county is looking for alternatives to the fuel tax to support the expansions to the transportation system.
- Honolulu Healthcare system components – Briefings and updates: Members added a few more items to get updates on - malpractice and tort reform; elderly-a disparity group in American health care?; economic comparison of the Canadian, British and American health systems; and Maine's Dirigo universal coverage plan.
- Kauai Moana Taa, Coordinator Kauai Keiki Injury Prevention Coalition and member Zac Octavio, Kauai AMR manager, presented a clear and comprehensive orientation on Hawaii's keiki car safety laws, statistics and prevention activities (ie, random check-point police inspections, free car seat check-ups for families-297 seats were checked in 2003, car seat inspector training/certification, educational outreach to parents and pediatricians, etc.). Members were surprised to hear that injury is the #1 killer of Hawaii's children and that most of these injuries are due to vehicle crashes. Members congratulated the Coalition on Kauai's achievement of having the highest seatbelt compliance rate in the State.
- Tri-Isle Richard Young, Maui District resource teacher for Health and Physical Education with the Department of Education, talked to the SAC about health programs in the schools, future directions for health and physical education and the upcoming Coordinated School Health Program to enhance overall health in schools. The members are interested in hearing more about health in the schools at future meetings.

West Oahu SAC members continued the discussion on developing a pilot project for health education units in schools. They are continuing to gather information about working with the DOE and past successes in West Oahu communities. They will be examining which schools to approach.

Windward SAC members discussed worksite health programs and total health and wellness management. They plan to look into becoming involved in a study on whether workplace health programs demonstrate results and have a positive impact on people's health and performance. They are considering ways to work with and support efforts of employers.
